Curb recycling subsidies on table

By NEIL MACKINNON
Metro Calgary

Low-income Calgarians could get a break on their curbside recycling bill.

A report for Wednesday's city utilities and environment committee states 34,000 of the 300,000 to be serviced by the 2009 program may be eligible for low-income subsidies.

The 50 per cent subsidy will create a $1.6-million shortfall, which will boost overall cost per household $105 per year from the original $96.

However, the cost of not implementing a subsidy program may be much higher, said Scott Hunter, 25, who has known a hard time or two.

"Without a subsidy, it just means that lower-income people will have to scrape even harder to come up with the money, find better ways of managing their cash, and that might mean leaving out some of the things they really need to survive."

The report also said a stand-alone program, administered through Enmax billing, is pegged at $1 million, for an estimated $2.6-million annual total program cost.

"There's a lot of money involved here ... it's something we're going to have to take a long, hard look at," said committee chair Ald. Linda Fox-Mellway, predicting some pretty "heavy debate."

Organizers ecstatic as 35,000 music lovers rock out at event

Not letting the Saturday burning sun or Sunday drizzle stop them, over 35,000 music lovers descended upon the highly entertaining Virgin Music Festival this weekend at Fort Calgary.

beyond expectations
» Virgin's Nathan Rosenberg said attendance was about 15,000 more people than expected.

And organizers of the epic show were ecstatic about the response they received after bringing the giant festival to the city for the first time.

"We were very pleased with the weather and the turnout. This city has such a young, dynamic and vibrant fan base and we thank them for their support," Virgin chief marketing officer Nathan Rosenberg said.

"Our objective was to create a weekend that was unforgettable and full of moments people will remember forever, and I think we did that," director of Canada Virgin Festival Andrew Bridge added.

Skatepark razor fight over girl: Cops

ATTACK A razor-blade swinging altercation at Millennium Skate Park that sent one man to hospital to get around 100 stitches was over a girl, police said.

At about 3:20 p.m. Saturday, Calgary police were called to the park at 1000 12 St. SW where an 18-year-old man had been slashed on his head, neck and forearms.

Insp. Steve Lorne said the two men were "hanging out together" when the 18-year-old began chatting up a girl, leading to "consensual fight" that quickly turned ugly when the 19-year-old accused pulled out a razor-blade and began "slicing and dicing."

"It was a pretty vicious attack," said Lorne, noting knife fights are becoming unfortunately more commonplace in Calgary, as are gun-related incidents, while razorblade attacks are comparatively rare.

Evan Black has been charged with aggravated assault, assault with a weapon and possession of a weapon for dangerous purpose.

Union gets national support

CUPE behind CBE staff labour fight

By KRISTA SYLVESTER
Metro Calgary

A national union is throwing their full support behind the Calgary staff association in its ongoing labour battle with the Calgary Board of Education.

Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) president Paul Moist told Metro exclusively they believe the CBE's latest move of buying ads to inform the public of their offer will "backfire".

"I think the CBE would be better spending that money on the bargaining table. I think it was an attempt to get the public on their side, but I think it wasn't a good move," Moist said.

Moist said the CBE isn't addressing the actual problems.

"The staff members are only working four or five hours a day. What does hourly pay mean when they aren't getting enough hours a day?"

Staff Association union president Bill Flookes has said all along the issue isn't about money – it's about respect and security.

"Our members get upset when they try to classify this as a money issue," Flookes told Metro.

The CUPE represents a number of maintenance workers in the CBE up for contract negotiations next year.

CBE spokesperson Ted Flitton has said the school board's recent offer to the staff association is "fair" and "reasonable" and the wage increases would reflect five per cent the first year and 4.53 per cent the second year.

But CUPE Local 40 president Bob Anderson said the CBE should rethink their priorities.

"If this offer was on the table for our members, we would reject it, without a doubt," Anderson said.

Festival promotes green attitude

Eco-friendly Virgin Fest says it will get better each year

By KRISTA SYLVESTER
Metro Calgary

Leaving other cities green with envy — the Calgary Virgin Music Festival was more environmentally friendly than past music festivals.

Organizers of the event said that as the music festival continues to grow it will also grow greener each year.

"We're very pleased with the efforts and the outcomes of the environmentally conscience festival," chief marketing officer for Virgin, Nathan Rosenberg, said.

"We're just trying to do our part, especially in this country where we are responsible for so much of the pollution in the world," he added.

Virgin was encouraging garbage and recycling pick-up, with watchdogs ensuring people put the right stuff in the right place, and there were phone chargers powered by solar energy, among other things.

Sponsors and green friendly TD Canada Trust were at the festival and are already environmental leaders, according to manager of community relations Ellen Dungen.

"We're always involving and engaging our customers in ways they can be greener and this festival was another way to do that as we know younger people are already learning to do their part in the community," she said.

McKenzie's small 'Towne' feel

Community Profile: McKenzie Towne

Flea market shows tight-knit borough

By KRISTA SYLVESTER
Metro Calgary

KRISTA SYLVESTER/METRO CALGARY

Thursday flea markets in the community of McKenzie Towne have grown in popularity since they started only three weeks ago — and are a sign of the overwhelming community spirit in the southeast community.

Though short in tenure, the close-knit borough of McKenzie Towne is long on community spirit.

Walking into the community you wouldn't be able to tell it's been around for little more than a decade, as everybody seems to know everyone else, especially at the neighbourhood flea market.

"You kind of get the feeling the people in this community wouldn't want to live anywhere else," area alderman Ric McIver told Metro. "It's a very walkable community — you don't need a car to get to work or to the grocery store."

Young mothers Carmen Siddons and Janice Young walk to the neighbourhood flea market every Thursday — an event that is a huge hit in the community, attracting hundreds of people.

"It's just nice to have fresh produce within walking distance," Young said.

"And it's nice to see all of the different things they have here — and each week it's something different."

McKenzie Towne Hall coordinator Franca Ricci echoed those thoughts, telling Metro the flea market had grown each week since its start three weeks ago.

"People love to walk down here and there are a lot of families and dogs and more people out each week. Plus, there are new vendors every week so there is always something new to check out," she said.

People of all ages and walks of life lined up at the market, buying homemade arts and crafts, kettle popcorn and unique clothing — just to scratch the surface — and everyone had a smile doing it.

The city's best-kept secret will run every Thursday until September and non-Mackenzie Town residents needn't worry — this is one small "Towne" welcoming the rest of the city with open arms.

No halfway in pesticide ban

By NEIL MACKINNON
Metro Calgary

There will soon be no room for halfway stances on Calgary's pesticide use.

The city's utilities and environment committee Wednesday will move to design an educational awareness plan encouraging pesticide alternatives by next May as they inch towards an outright outlaw of the chemicals by the end of 2010.

"This will be about more than getting the ball rolling, this will be about actually getting it done," said Ald. Brian Pincott while criticizing a city park pilot project instituted last year that designated five Calgary parks as pesticide-free zones, calling it a "willy-nilly" approach to best practises.

"I'd love to say they are a roaring success, but they're not aside from being pesticide-free, and the problem is we need to fully change the way we look at things and do things and this park project was only half intentional."

CUPE calls layoffs suspicious

By KRISTA SYLVESTER

The head of CUPE is calling the recent Air Canada announcement to slash jobs "suspicious" in timing and nature.

The Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) national president Paul Moist told Metro exclusively that Air Canada's plan to slash 2,000 jobs is convenient at a time when gas prices are rising.

"The outlook for the industry is serious, but we're suspicious about the emphasis, timing and intent of this announcement," Moist said.

He also pointed out airline industry expert Joseph D'Cruz's assertion to CBC last week that "there is no evidence Air Canada is in serious difficulty."

Liberals to court immigrants

Opposition hopes to reconnect with cultural supporters

While Liberal Leader Stéphane Dion is out this summer selling his "green-shift" plan, his deputy, Michael Ignatieff, will be on the road as well, trying to put together a new party platform on the crucial issue of immigration.

Ignatieff and long-time Liberal MP Maurizio Bevilacqua are in the midst of planning a cross-country trek to get ideas on immigration reform and reconnect the Liberal party to its cultural-community bases across Canada.

Conservative reform

» This month, Prime Minister Stephen Harper's government managed to slip an important immigration reform into a budget bill — resulting in more power for Immigration Minister Diane Finley to decide who gets in and who stays out of the country.

"Mr. Ignatieff and Mr. Bevilacqua will work on an immigration plan. They will consult," Dion told Torstar News Service. "We don't like what the Conservatives have done on immigration, but we want to come with a good plan to propose to Canadians and Michael and Maurizio have decided they will come with recommendations for the party."

The federal Liberals once owned the immigration issue in Canada and counted immigrants as a rock-solid base of support.

But that base has been eroded by concerted Conservative attempts to court various ethnic groups with everything ranging from money to apologies to government greeting cards on holidays.

Security tight at bomb-plot trial

Clampdown unprecedented, Ottawa police say

Cement partitions and security fences are in place and there will be no parking in areas of Elgin Street today as a high-profile terror trial gets underway in Ottawa.

More than four years after being arrested on criminal terrorism charges in connection to a bomb plot in England, the trial of Orleans resident Momin Khawaja, 33, begins today, and security precautions are among the tightest Ottawa has seen, police say.

Newly installed security cameras, X-ray devices and additional police staff have been assigned to the downtown courthouse in a clampdown Staff-Sgt. Dave Veinotte calls unprecedented for Ottawa police.

"There have been trials where there has been extra security provided and a magnetometer (walk-through metal detector), but not an X-ray device before," said Veinotte.

British police named Khawaja as a co-conspirator in the case of five men jailed for life last year for plotting attacks on targets across Britain.

Khawaja, a software developer, faces life in prison if found guilty. He was arrested in March 2004 and has been jailed since. He is the first person charged under Canadian anti-terrorism laws put in place after Sept. 11, 2001. He has pleaded not guilty.

Bomber kills 15 in Iraq

Suicide attack by woman aimed at police officers

A female suicide bomber blew herself up among policemen outside a restaurant north of Baghdad yesterday, killing 15 people and wounding 35, Iraqi police said.

The attack took place in Baquba, capital of multi-ethnic Diyala province, where Sunni Islamist al Qaeda militants have sought to sow tension despite a succession of military offensives that have put the group on the back foot.

Police said the woman walked over to a group of policemen outside a restaurant then detonated explosives under her clothing. Several cars were set on fire.

"When she approached the police patrol, a powerful blast ripped through the area," said Adnan Fayadh, a photocopy shop owner who was nearby.

Police and the U.S. military said 15 people were killed in the attack, which was also near a number of government buildings in Baquba, 65 kilometres north of Baghdad. The U.S. military said the dead included seven policemen.

At a hospital morgue, white sheets covered most of the dead. A man wailed over a body lying on a stretcher.

Violence in Iraq has dropped to a four-year low, but yesterday's bombing was the second big attack in the past week.

U.S. forces have blamed a rogue Shiite militia group for a truck bomb that killed 63 people in Baghdad last Tuesday. That was the deadliest attack in Baghdad in more than three months.

U.S. officials accuse al Qaeda insurgents of carrying out scores of large-scale bombings, killing thousands of people in Iraq in the past few years.

A sustained military campaign against al Qaeda has pushed the group out of its traditional strongholds in Anbar province in the west and parts of Baghdad in the past year.

One region where al Qaeda forces regrouped was in the northern city of Mosul, described by the U.S. military as al Qaeda's last major urban stronghold.

Iraqi security officials say al Qaeda's network has been broken in Mosul following an offensive there.

Iraqi provincial elections might get delayed

Disputed northern city stalls process

Iraq's provincial elections, seen as vital for fostering national reconciliation, could be delayed because of disputes in parliament over the electoral law, several lawmakers said yesterday.

Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki has said the elections will be held on Oct. 1, but a dispute has emerged between Arab and Kurdish lawmakers over what to do about voting in the disputed oil rich city of Kirkuk in northern Iraq.

"There are many problems hindering us from agreeing the provincial elections law. One of the main problems is Kirkuk," Jalal al-Din al-Sagheer, head of the parliamentary bloc from the ruling Shiite Alliance, told Reuters.

"I think it will be very difficult to hold elections on time."

The electoral commission has said the draft law must be passed by the start of July to give it three months to prepare for the polls.

Mugabe rival exits election

Run-off process a 'sham': Tsvangirai

Zimbabwean opposition leader Morgan Tsvangirai pulled out of a run-off election against President Robert Mugabe, saying a free and fair poll was impossible in the current climate of violence.

Tsvangirai

Speaking only hours after his opposition Movement for Democratic Change (MDC) reported its rally had been broken up by pro-Mugabe youth militia yesterday, Tsvangirai called on the UN and the African Union to intervene to stop "genocide" in the former British colony.

"We in the MDC have resolved that we will no longer participate in this violent, illegitimate sham of an election process," he said.

The MDC and Tsvangirai, who beat Mugabe in a March 29 vote but failed to win the absolute majority needed to avoid a second ballot, have repeatedly accused government security forces and militia of strong-arm tactics to ensure a Mugabe victory in the June 27 poll.

The veteran leader has presided over a ruinous slide in a once prosperous economy. Millions have fled the political and economic crisis to neighbouring states. REUTERS

Darfur food crisis looms

Darfur faces a food crisis this year as a result of a "perfect storm" of growing violence, overcrowding in refugee camps and a bad harvest, the United Nations said yesterday.

The conflict in Darfur has prompted the world's largest humanitarian operation, which helps two-thirds of the region's six-million population.

But this year, a confluence of problems in the western Sudanese region could cause a spike in malnutrition rates and health problems, United Nations officials said.

"Four years into a massive humanitarian operation ... this is the year I think where we are going to see a reduction in (health) indicators as a result of this perfect storm," Mike McDonough, head of the UN humanitarian co-ordination office, said. REUTERS

Three dead in Lebanon clashes

At least three people were killed and 30 wounded yesterday in sectarian clashes in Lebanon's second-largest city Tripoli, security sources said.

Explosions and machine-gun fire rocked the city as Sunni Muslim supporters of the government and Alawite gunmen close to the Hezbollah-led opposition battled on the outskirts of the mainly Sunni Muslim port.

Lebanese army units deployed in the area and tried to end the fighting and local leaders held talks to contain the conflict. Dozens of families fled the scene of the clashes that tapered off after both sides agreed to a ceasefire, the sources said.

Several homes, shops and cars were damaged in the clashes that left the streets of the city largely deserted.

It was not immediately clear how the fighting began at dawn but tension has been high in recent weeks between the Sunni Bab Tibbaneh district and Alawite Jabal Mohsen. REUTERS

MEET CANADA'S NEWEST IDOLS

Nearly 10,000 auditioned, only 24 are left – now it's up to you to decide the rest. Tonight, for the first time in Canadian Idol history, 24 competitors will advance to the next phase of the competition on CTV. It's the beginning of a journey that will end with the crowning of the newest Canadian Idol in September.

Ranging in age from 17 to 29, the Top 24 were selected following an exhaustive search that took Canadian Idol judges to 10 cities and one "online stop" on the three-month audition tour. Among this season's elite group are a carpenter, a student, a housepainter, a songwriter, a backhoe operator, a music teacher, a respite care worker, a coffee barista and more, all representing Canada from coast to coast.

Now it's your turn, Canada! Over the next few weeks, the Top 24 will compete for your votes – only you can decide who will advance to the Top 10. Each vote means the chance to make dreams come true. Multiple competitors will be sent home every Wednesday, with 14 singers exiting the competition in just three short weeks. Canada has just one chance to get it right and choose the best 10 competitors who will be left vying for the prize. These 10 singers will entertain the country for the rest of the summer as part of Canada's biggest summertime television event. Get ready to vote!

Saudis promise to pump more oil

But oil minister skeptical increase will calm market

Top exporter Saudi Arabia is ready to pump more oil for the rest of the year, although that is unlikely to tame record prices, Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ali al-Naimi said yesterday.

"I am convinced that the supply and demand balances and crude oil production levels are not the primary drivers of the current market situation and that markets are already well-supplied," Naimi said at the unprecedented meeting in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, in response to record moves on the oil market.

Ali al-Naimi

Saudi Arabia has already said it will produce 9.7 million bpd in July, marking an increase in output of 550,000 bpd since May. For the longer term, Naimi said Saudi Arabia could increase its available capacity by an extra 2.5 million bpd above a current plan to reach 12.5 million bpd by next year.

Apart from the short-term supply-demand balance, investors have bought into futures markets because they believe oil supplies will be under strain for the foreseeable future. REUTERS

Canada urges transparency

Backs G8 call to probe speculation

Canada's Natural Resources Minister Gary Lunn said yesterday he pushed at an emergency meeting in Saudi Arabia of oil producing and consuming countries for more transparency in global oil markets to allow supply and demand to be the biggest influences on prices.

reserves

» With the oilsands, Canada's reserves are second only to Saudi Arabia's conventional resources in size. But unlike some OPEC countries, it has no spare capacity to tap in the short term to help cool runaway prices.

Lunn said Canada, the top energy supplier to the United States, supports the call from G8 finance ministers for investigations into the role of speculation in the surge of oil prices to near $140 a barrel.

He resisted any notion of regulating domestic fuel prices, arguing that consumers eventually pay more than in an unregulated market.

None of the delegates at the meeting was under the belief that a quick fix to the crisis was at hand, Lunn said. REUTERS

Flames add offence with Cammalleri

Calgary continues makeover by dealing Tanguay

By LAURENCE HEINEN
for Metro Calgary

Mike Cammalleri was excited to find out the Calgary Flames acquired his rights on Friday night shortly before the start of the 2008 National Hockey League entry draft.

"Initially, it's a little bit to take in," said the 5-foot-9, 185-pound forward who hails from Richmond Hill, Ont. "I'm really excited about the prospect of coming to Calgary. Two days later, I think I'm more excited than I was then."

In five seasons with the Los Angeles Kings, Cammalleri put up a career high of 34 goals and 46 assists in 2006-07 before scoring 19 times and adding 28 assists in a season that was shortened to 63 games last year due to injuries.

"Obviously he can play on our top two lines," said general manager Darryl Sutter, who traded away Calgary's 17th overall pick this year and a second-round pick in 2009 to acquire Cammalleri and the Kings second-round pick (48th overall) this year.

In addition, Calgary also acquired the Montreal Canadiens first-round pick (25th) in the 2008 draft along with their second-round pick in the 2009 draft in exchange for left-winger Alex Tanguay and the Flames fifth-round pick (138th) in the 2008 draft.

"I think (Cammalleri) gives us the offence we're losing with Alex," Sutter said.

Cammalleri is excited about potentially playing on a line with captain Jarome Iginla.

"I don't think there's a guy better that you want to play with," said Cammalleri, 26, who can play both centre and left wing. "There are a lot of other great options on the team, too."

Cammalleri said the Flames have a core group of players, including Iginla, goalie Miikka Kiprusoff and defencemen Dion Phaneuf and Robyn Regehr, who have all signed long-term contracts and are committed to icing a competitive squad in Calgary for years to come.

"The identity of the Calgary Flames is pretty special," he said.

"For me, I really want to be part of that."

Calgary selects power forward in first round

By LAURENCE HEINEN
for Metro Calgary

After making headlines by trading away Alex Tanguay to the Montreal Canadiens and acquiring Mike Cammalleri from the Los Angeles Kings, the Calgary Flames still had some work left at the 2008 National Hockey League entry draft in Ottawa.

On Friday night, the Flames used the 25th overall pick to select forward Greg Nemisz of the Windsor Spitfires.

"It's amazing," Nemisz said on an NHL Radio broadcast shortly after pulling a Flames jersey over his 6-foot-3, 197-pound frame. "It's just such a great atmosphere over there so I'm really excited about it."

Nemisz scored 34 goals and added 33 assists in 67 games this past season with the Spitfires and Calgary general manager Darryl Sutter is hoping the young prospect will develop into an NHL power forward.

"He's a big kid and he's got good hands," Sutter said. "He protects the puck well. Hopefully, sooner than later, he gets to play for us."

On Saturday, the Flames used their second-round pick they acquired in the Cammalleri deal to select forward Mitch Wahl from the the Spokane Chiefs. The Flames picked two more WHLers in Lance Bouma of the Vancouver Giants (third round, 78th) and Ryley Grantham of the Moose Jaw Warriors (sixth round, 168th).

Casillas stops pair of penalties to knock out Italy

EURO2008

Spain beat Italy 4-2 on penalties after a goalless Euro 2008 quarter-final yesterday to end their shootout jinx and reach the last four of a major tournament for the first time in 24 years.

They will now face Russia, who they thrashed 4-1 in their opening group game, thanks to substitute midfielder Cesc Fabregas who scored the decisive spot kick after Iker Casillas had saved two of Italy's penalties.

It is the first time Spain have reached the last four since they got to the European Championship final in 1984 and came after they had lost three previous quarter-final shootouts in major tournaments, all on June 22.

The victory was also their first over Italy at a major tournament outside the Olympic Games.

"It was about time we won one. We deserve it," said Casillas, who saved shots from Daniele De Rossi and Antonio Di Natale.

"Losing on penalties again would have been terrible. Now the fans can enjoy this because we've got to the semifinals at last."

The game ended goalless after extra time as both well-organized defences coped relatively comfortably with the too-cautious attempts to break them down.

"It was a very evenly balanced game," said Spain coach Luis Aragones. "Italy are always a difficult side to break down and very dangerous on the break."

Two years ago Italy won the World Cup on penalties and current coach Roberto Donadoni had no complaints yesterday.

"The players should leave here with their heads held high," he said.

Germany will face Turkey in the other semifinal on Wednesday in Basel, Switzerland. REUTERS

Geeks lose out in workforce?

High school personas affect career: Study

Does your status in high school impact where you'll eventually be in the workforce?

As high school graduations approach, Career Builder.com asked over 6,000 full-time workers age 30 and older to categorize their high school persona, and then compared those personas in terms of job level, salary, industry and job satisfaction.

Categories included personas such as student government, athlete, geek, honour society, cheerleader, drama club, teacher's pet and class clown.

> « Thirty-nine per cent of workers age 30 and older said their high school experience had an influence on the job they hold today. »
> CareerBuilder's vice-president of human resources Rosemary Haefner

"Thirty-nine per cent of workers age 30 and older said their high school experience had an influence on the job they hold today," said Rosemary Haefner, vice-president of human resources at CareerBuilder. "While there are a variety of factors that determine one's career path, high school … is essentially a stepping stone into a world of opportunity."

Comparing job levels, the study suggests that cheerleaders were more likely to hold a vice-president role. Those who were in student government and teacher's pets had the greatest number of workers serving in director/ manager/ team lead positions today (24 per cent). Teacher's pets also had the greatest number of workers holding administrative/clerical positions (41 per cent).

Former honour society members, athletes and geeks were more drawn toward professional and technical services positions at 59 per cent, 55 per cent and 52 per cent, respectively.

Former student government members were more likely to report making a six-figure salary with 12 per cent stating they are paid an annual salary of $100,000 or more. Honour society members followed and then athletes, geeks and class clowns.

Student government and honour society members and athletes ranked highest among those who earn an annual salary of $50,000. Teacher's pets were more likely to report earning less than $35,000 per year.

Job satisfaction levels are highest among teacher's pets and cheerleaders. Eighty-one per cent of teacher's pets and 76 per cent of cheerleaders said they are satisfied with their jobs overall.

Geeks and class clowns had the greatest number of workers who reported dissatisfaction with their jobs at 21 per cent and 18 per cent, respectively.

Virgin Festival closes the generation gap

By HEATHER SETKA
For Metro Calgary

Fort Calgary was a sea of tattooed hipsters in thrift store ensembles, suburban moms and dads pushing strollers and a fair share of salt-and-pepper seasoned concert-goers over the weekend.

This motley crew of over 35,000 united under the label "music lovers" for the Virgin Festival.

Fans of all rock sub-genres and ages came from throughout Alberta and across Canada for the two-day festival headlined by Stone Temple Pilots and The Tragically Hip.

"It's good to see lots of young people," said Calgary-born, Edmonton-dwelling Jeff Sowiak. The 45-year-old drove down with a carload of friends to see bands like The Flaming Lips and Guelph, Ont. rockers Constantines.

"The Flaming Lips have been around for ages," Sowiak said. "I grew up with them. It's good to see them bringing in a younger crowd."

> « It's the experience that matters, not just the music. »
> fan Kerry McLaughlin

Eighteen-year-old Ronna Joudan flew in from Winnipeg to take in the festival with her 31-year-old cousin, Calgarian Hedy Taylor. Despite some media criticism that the line-up lacked lustre, Joudan said it was "a good mix of older and newer bands."

"We're totally bonding over the line-up," Taylor said as she anxiously awaited the moment when her beloved "Hip" would take the stage. "I've been giving her some of the history of the bands I listened to when I was her age."

"Yeah, she's been telling me about STP (Stone Temple Pilots) and I've been filling her in on the bands I like," said Joudan, who was most excited about opening her cousin's ears to Toronto/Montreal indie-popsters Stars.

Other Virgin highlights include The Flaming Lips' lead singer Wayne Coyne crowd-surfing in his famous bubble contraption during their Saturday performance. And Stars brought thousands of eager listeners to their feet within moments of beginning their Sunday afternoon set.

Twenty-seven-year-old mom and fan Kerry McLaughlin said she couldn't pick out one moment as her favourite from the entire two days. McLaughlin brought her 10-year-old son Daylen so they could enjoy doing something together that was neither adult nor kid focused.

"It's the experience that matters, not just the music," McLaughlin said.

Fixing Canada's top bedroom problem

COLIN & JUSTIN'S
INTERIOR DIVINE

Come on, this one's a no brainer — careful planning will transform your slumber zone into a calm sanctuary. Yup, a well crafted boudoir should be a relaxing retreat and an escape from the outside world.

But as we often say, "To fail to plan is to plan to fail." Many bedrooms, in reality, are crazy obstacle courses of piled-up laundry, mismatched furniture and saggy past-the-sell-by-date mattresses.

The biggest Canadian bedroom problem is multi-tasking, which is to say, asking too much of too small a space.

So that means no ironing boards, no exercise bikes and definitely no computers stashed in a corner. Remember — it's a bedroom, after all, not a home office or gym.

The main event in any slumber zone is the bed and, because it's the largest feature, it identifies your space. In much the same way as a painted or papered feature wall will provide personality, so too will a well dressed bed provide visual punch.

It's so worth taking all this into account when shopping for a new bed — or bed linen — so make sure you have a plan.

One third of your life, after all, is spent tucked in, so invest in a good quality mattress and treat yourself to the best pillows and dressings you can find.

Brian Gluckstein's range at the Bay is awesome value, so wander in for inspiration.

Colin and Justin's Home Heist airs on HGTV Tuesdays at 9 p.m., Saturdays at 7 p.m. and Sundays at 2 p.m.

banishing bedroom blues

Turn your nightmare bedroom into a heavenly haven by following these simple tips:

- Make your bed a tactile feast by mixing satin with cool cotton and topping the lot with a silky throw.
- Satisfy your sense of smell with relaxing scented candles or some good old fashioned fresh air. During warmer months, air out your bedroom for at least half an hour each day.
- Make sure bedrooms are cosy and restful. Avoid bright colours like vivid orange and zesty yellow as they won't induce sleep.
- Turn your mattress every week to make it last longer and spread wear and tear.
- Don't overfill closets — lose the things you no longer wear. Seasonally adjust as the climate changes. Vacuum-pack winter garb until the mercury descends.
- Position your bed diagonally opposite the entrance door on the largest unbroken wall and make that your feature wall.
- Opt for warm flooring such as wood or carpet, and avoid ceramic tile, marble or granite. There's nothing worse, after all, than getting out of bed and stepping onto a cold floor.

Ellen, Rachael lead Daytime Emmys

Rachel Ray

TV Comedian Ellen DeGeneres and Rachael Ray, the cooking and lifestyle guru, shared the Daytime Emmy spotlight Friday as they split U.S. television's top two awards for entertainment talk shows. In another high point, Jeanne Cooper, the grand dame of America's longtime No. 1 soap opera, was named best lead actress in a drama series for her 35-year role on The Young And The Restless.

The victory for Rachael Ray in the race for best talk show marked an upset over The Ellen DeGeneres Show, which won the prize in each of the last four years. But DeGeneres pulled off a triumph for a fourth straight year as best talk show host. REUTERS

Finally, the CBC gets it right

IN CASE YOU MISSED IT: Air India 182, which aired last night on CBC, puts me in the rare position of not only recommending a CBC production that isn't Dragon's Den, but insisting that you make time to catch the film when it re-airs.

CBC viewership figures, much as they might be spun to make it look like the national broadcaster is constantly on the verge of recovering its profile among viewers, suggest nonetheless that anything that airs on the network stands a worse chance of being seen by the average Canadian than a Simpsons re-run.

If a kind of Pavlovian aversion to CBC programming should prevent anyone from seeing Sturla Gunnarsson's dramatized recreation of the 1985 bombing of an Air India jumbo jet en route from Canada to England, it would be a shame, since this is exactly the sort of project the CBC should be commissioning, not occasionally but almost monthly, in a better world.

Director Sturla Gunnarsson

Gunnarsson is the director who made the far better movie version of Beowulf — the one that cost a fraction of Robert Zemeckis' recent heavily-hyped travesty, with its embarrassing video game digital sheen. His retelling of the Air India 182 story borrows a few formal touches from Paul Greengrass' United 93, but paces itself more gravely, as if in responding to the passage of time in which the tragedy has resonated.

Time flashes back and forth in the first half of the film, as the events leading up to the bombing come into focus, and then seems to blow apart in slow motion in the aftermath of the disappearance of the plane over the North Atlantic.

We're allowed to understand how hard it would have been to prevent the bombing with what information the RCMP had up till this point — in situations like this, hindsight is inevitably all too clear — while the underfunding and bureaucratic blunders of the country's intelligence services make their appearance on cue; a muddleheaded CSIS policy of erasing wiretaps after having them transcribed would lead to two key suspects in the plot by Sikh extremists being acquitted.

INTELLEVISION
RICK McGINNIS
rick.mcginnis@metronews.ca

Even while it was happening, the events surrounding Air India 182 often seemed confusing, and there was an unfortunate tendency to treat it as an internal dispute within the Indian and Sikh communities — typifed by then-Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's puzzling apology to the Indian government, but not the families of Canadians who actually died in the bombing. Gunnarsson somehow manages to make it all clear, without swamping the film in details and lessening the still-raw emotional trauma that marks those left behind.

Air India 182 re-airs next Sunday at 10 p.m. on CBC Newsworld, and deserves a few more airings and a decent life on DVD, if only to give the network a prominent model for how to fulfill its mandate.

Amy dead in three months?

Father's concern: Amy Winehouse's father Mitch says the Grammy-winning singer is suffering from emphysema and he fears she could be "dead in three months," usmagazine.com reports.

"The doctors have told her if she goes back to smoking drugs it won't just ruin her voice, it will kill her," he told U.K. newspaper the Daily Mail.

Winehouse, 24, was taken to the hospital last week for tests after she fainted at home in London.

"With smoking the crack cocaine and the cigarettes her lungs are all gunked up," Mitch said. "There are nodules around the chest and dark marks. She's got 70 per cent lung capacity."

If she doesn't get treatment, she could need an oxygen mask to breathe, Mitch told the Daily Mail.

"The doctors have said that if she had continued the way she was going she could have ended up an invalid — she wouldn't have been able to breathe," he added. "If drugs mean more to her than breathing properly, then so be it."

The digits 1 through 9 will appear exactly once in each row, each column, and each zone. (A zone is an outlined 3x3 grid within the larger puzzle grid. There are nine of these zones in the puzzle.) Do not enter a digit into a box if it already appears elsewhere in the same 3x3 zone, or in the same row across the puzzle, or column down the puzzle.
